SCHOOL SITE CHOSEN

Committee Receives Offer From William M. Wood of Desirable Plot of Land for School in Shawheen Village

The following correspondence tells its own story and it is a good story. The Shawheen Village school site is settled so far as the committee is concerned, and the next step should come promptly.

From Mr. Wood to the Committee
August 1, 1922
To the Board of Selectmen and School Committee,
Andover, Mass.

Gentlemen:
On behalf of the Directors of the American Woolen Company I am happy to present to the town of Andover a site for a school building in Shawheen Village. The gravel is to be reserved by, and removed at the earliest convenience of the Company. The location covers approximately five acres, bounded by Corbett road, Poor street, Magnolia avenue, Middle street and Allen street. All of this area is now owned by the American Woolen Company, with the exception of a small portion divided into small house lots, only one or two of which are now occupied by buildings. To complete the area described, it would be necessary for the town to make a taking of these lots. By such taking, however, it would be possible to provide not only for the school property but also for improved street accommodations for all the adjacent property.

I am acquainted with the difficulties that you have met in your long and patient investigation of the situation, but I hope that by this gift on the part of the American Woolen Company, the difficulties will be solved, and work of erecting the much-needed school in this growing community may proceed smoothly and apace.

Yours very truly,
WILLIAM M. WOOD
President

From the Committee to Mr. Wood
A letter of acceptance was read by Douglas Crawford of the school committee as follows:

To William M. Wood, Esquire:
The joint committee of the board of selectmen and the school committee of the

Mrs. Freeman Abbott Elected Chaplain to Succeed Mrs. Markham W. Stackpole—Plans Made for Supper

Mrs. Freeman Abbott of Ballardvale was elected chaplain of the Woman's Auxiliary to the American Legion to succeed Mrs. Markham W. Stackpole, resigned, at a meeting held in the legion rooms last evening with thirty members present and Mrs. Fred G. Cheney presiding. The resignation of Mrs. Stackpole, made necessary by her removal from Andover, was accepted with great regret.

It was impossible to hold the installation of officers as Mrs. Marshman of Lawrence was unable to be present.

The installation will be held next Thursday evening at eight o'clock and every member of the auxiliary is urged to be present.

Plans were discussed for a cafeteria supper to be held by the auxiliary at the Guild house sometime this month, probably September 29. The president of the auxiliary, Mrs. Fred G. Cheney, will be the general chairman and she will be assisted by the captains of the various money-making groups: Mrs. John Henderson, Mrs. Frank M. Foster, Mrs. Freeman Abbott, Mrs. Douglas Hutchison, and Mrs. Harry Gouck.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. John A. Collins, Miss Emma Cashman, Mrs. Joseph McCarthy, Miss Jennie Barrett and Miss Mary Barrett.

School Board Confirms Appointments at Meeting Tuesday Evening—Adequate Supply of Coal Already Delivered

At a meeting of the school board held Tuesday evening with Chairman Roy H. Bradford presiding, the appointments of several new teachers were confirmed and Superintendent Sanborn reported everything as in readiness for the opening of the public schools on Monday. Repairs, except the shingling of the Richardson school, have been completed, and the entire supply of anthracite coal has been delivered, with a supply of bituminous coal at the central heating plant sufficient to last for several months.

The teachers committee reported the resignation of Miss Carolyn Dean who has been a teacher in the central schools for twenty-nine years. Miss Dean plans to make her home with her brother George M. Dean in the middle West. Miss E. Blanche Hinds, a graduate of the Boston Normal school, and a teacher of several years experience has been elected to fill her place as a teacher of Grade six.

Miss Elizabeth Loftus, who spent the last year in travel and study abroad, will resume her duties as teacher of modern languages. Miss Eliza V. Marshall of Lawrence carried on this work during the absence of Miss Loftus.

Lane resigned, as assistant in the commercial department of the Pynchard school. She has had several years experience and taught last year in the Howe High school, Billerica. Miss Anna E. Chase, formerly principal of the Stowe school, will resume work in that Phillips Academy will open next week with the largest enrollment in the history of the school, the increase over last year, however, being limited to the added accommodations which have been made possible by the addition to Williams hall and the opening of Johnson hall which has just been completed. The total enrollment for the year will probably exceed 600.

The first Chapel exercises will be held Tuesday morning at nine o'clock followed by entrance examinations. On Wednesday chapel will be held at 7.45 and the regular exercises will begin.

Work is being pushed night and day to complete the restoration and re-conditioning of Pearson hall which is now solidly on its new foundations. The outside of the building has been refinished after the original Bulfinch design, and these changes have necessitated the moving of the stairway back into the center of the building. The hall as it stood formerly contained three recitation rooms on each floor but the interior changes have reduced this number to two rooms. The space formerly occupied by the room in the center of each floor, is now taken up by the main stairway and a series of conference rooms, which allow an opportunity for faculty offices and personal meetings between students and members of the faculty.

There remains much grading work to be done about the hall, and pending its completion, a board walk will allow ready access for students. The plans for the new hall which will be built adjacent to Pearson have not as yet been finally approved, but it is hoped that work may be started before the winter makes outside operations difficult.

The stone for the outside construction of the Memorial tower is now on hand, but the work is still held up because of the impossibility of obtaining the necessary fabricated steel. It is expected that this work will soon continue, however, and the authorities have every hope of seeing the completion of

LENITA LANE of the Lawrence Colonial Players

COLONIAL, LAWRENCE

The stock season at Lawrence will open next Monday evening when Ye Colonial Players, under the personal direction of Bernard Steele, will present a clever comedy drama, "Adam and Eva," at the Colonial theatre. Performances will be given each evening at 8 o'clock and there will be matinees on Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday afternoons at 2 o'clock. The company will be seen in a new play each week.

The return of Mr. Steele to Lawrence means that this vicinity will see some of the best plays obtainable presented in the best possible fashion. Mr. Steele has had three seasons in Lawrence and his work there is well known. He has gathered together one of the strongest companies he has ever assembled, and the prospects of a long and successful season are bright.

Miss Lenita Lane, a charming woman, will be the leading lady and opposite her Charles Dingle will play. Others in the company include Maud Blair, Frank Charlton, Donald McKee, Walton Butterfield, Edwin Varney, Zonia Allen, and Maude Odell. Of these only Miss Blair has played here before.

Andover patrons will be glad to know that they can have the same seats saved for them for the same performance each week by becoming a subscriber for the season. This obligates one in no way, but makes it possible to have the favorite seats saved each week with no extra expense and without any trouble. Simply go to the box office and pick out your seats and say you desire them for the season. You will then be given a card bearing your name, your seat number, or numbers, and the particular performance each week for which you desire them. With the card you will receive a pocket card case. This guarantees to you that your seats will be saved. If, for some reason or other, you find you cannot attend some week, simply notify the theatre. If, however, you do not claim your seats for two weeks in succession, your name will be taken from the list of subscribers.

Stock performances at the Colonial theatre, Lawrence, this year will compare favorably with any similar performances anywhere, and they will merit a hearty support. Those interested in fine plays adequately staged and played by a thoroughly good company should support such an enterprise as strongly as possible.

Seats are now on sale for next week's performances at the Colonial theatre box office.

MAJESTIC

It is indeed a welcome announcement that the second season of Shubert Vaudeville at the Majestic Theatre will open on Monday afternoon, September 11, with no less a feature than the world-famous dialect comedians Weber and Fields, re-united, and heading their own company once more. Joe Weber and Lew Fields were the best known actors on the vaudeville, musical comedy and revue stage during the heyday of their little but famous Music Hall in New York City, but they separated after the northward march of the theatrical centre in the Metropolitan necessitated the closing of their unique playhouse.

The Messrs. Shubert announce that this season, in their changed chain of vaudeville houses, extending from coast to coast, they will adhere closely to their policy of unique unit shows, consisting of a new revue each week, headed by a well-known musical comedy star, or stars, with the introduction of a vaudeville programme, the vaudeville artists taking part also in the revues. Weber and Fields, themselves, will be seen in a big musical revue aptly termed "Re-united." In addition they will appear in the vaudeville portion of the programme, which includes Lynn Cantor, Charles T. Aldrich, "LaDolbe," "Tulip Land," and other European and American specialties. It is promised that the chorus will be up to the standard set by Weber and Fields in their justly celebrated Music Hall in New York several years ago, a standard that has since been equalled only by the biggest and most expensive revues and follies. Weber and Fields for these reunion appearances have drawn on their old Music Hall acts, many of them, such as the choking act and the pool room scene, famous throughout the country. In fact, there were so many clever acts in their old productions that the comedians will change their skit every night. Notwithstanding the expensive nature of this opening attraction in Shubert Vaudeville, the same popular scale of prices is at prevailed last season will be maintained, with one dollar as the highest price at night, and twenty-five and fifty cents at the daily matinees.

PLYMOUTH

"The Nest," which William A. Brady is presenting at the Plymouth theatre, Boston, and now entering upon the second week of its limited engagement here, is regarded as one of the greatest plays of the past decade. The bracelet was a family heirloom, being the gift of the groom's maternal grandfather, Jackson Swift, to his bride. Her going-away dress was of blue point twill with pipings of jade and a blue velvet hat to match.

Miss Gertrude Franklin, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of sunset tulle with overdress of rose tulle and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses, carnations and asters.

SCHOOLS OPEN MONDAY

building as teacher of history in the Junior High school.

A new room required by the State for retarded pupils will be opened with Miss Louise M. Stearns in charge. Miss Stearns is a graduate of the Fitchburg Normal school and has made a special study of backward children at Vineland, N. J. Children in charge of Miss Stearns will be drawn from Grades four, five and six who are three or more years retarded with possibly a few from grades seven and eight, making them approximately the same age as other pupils of the junior high school. About fifteen children will be benefited by this new arrangement.

The vacancy in Grade six at the central schools caused by the resignation of Miss Alberta Espey will be filled by Miss Eunice Stack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stack of Summer street. She is a graduate of the Pynchard school and of the Salem Normal school and has taught for several years in Norwood.

Miss Florence Holt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brooks F. Holt of South Main street, will be the teacher of the first and second grades in the Bradlee school in place of Miss Kathryn Mahoney who has received an appointment in Lawrence. Miss Holt has recently been teaching in Wakefield.

Mrs. Georgianne Lowjoy Hilton will continue as teacher at the Bailey school where she substituted last spring. Mrs. Hilton was formerly assistant to the superintendent of schools.

Miss Ruth M. Gaines of Lawrence, a graduate of the Lowell Normal school, will be the teacher at the North school.

The new supervisor of music will be Miss Helen Dugid who comes to Andover from Uxbridge. She is a graduate of the Lowell Normal school and has also studied at the New England Conservatory of Music.

The board voted to ask the selectmen to provide police patrolling of Bartlett street, from Chestnut to Chapel avenue, to protect the school children. This is made necessary by the extraordinary amount of travel, on account of the reconstruction of Main street and the police protection will be needed until Main street is again open to travel.

Among the many food sales held in Andover during the past year those in charge of these able workers have been notable for the quality and quantity of excellent home-made food offered to the buying public and for the generous sums of money realized for good works.

Mrs. Alexander Sheriff whose Scotch scores are eagerly sought at all food sales will have charge of these goodies for the tea table.

Waukegan Camp Fire Girls at Mansfield

An Andover girl, Miss Ruth Pritchard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Pritchard of Morton street, carried off the special cup for excellency in athletics at the New England camp of the Camp Fire Girls at West Mansfield, which came to a close Monday. Miss Pritchard excelled in swimming, diving and general field events, and her total points brought her the silver cup presented by the Boston Kiwanis club.

She was also leader of the team chosen from among the Camp Fire Girls which took first place and defeated the team led by her twin sister, Miss Nettie Pritchard. The latter led all the girls in camp in diving and her exhibition of the swim dive, judges said, was the most graceful seen.

The awards were made at the "Round Up" on Saturday and visitors were present from all over the state. It was also a reunion for the girls of the Waukegan Camp Fire of this town and nearly every member attended. Miss Carita Bigelow, the leader of the Waukegan Camp, was present and it was a source of great pleasure to her to see her friend in the "Round Up." The announcement of the awarding of the athletic cup to Miss Ruth Pritchard was the signal for general rejoicing, and she was showered with congratulations.

That the Waukegan Camp Fire girls were leaders at the New England Camp was shown in the selection by the counselors of many of the girls for parts in the pageant "The Circle of the Princess Pocahontas." Written by Miss Lotta Clark, president of the organization, it was given publicity for the first time. It was intended to show how the Camp Fire Girls organization has perpetuated the principles of "work, health and love," which the Indian maiden Pocahontas herself knew and practiced.

The pageant was given in two episodes with a prologue. In the first episode, Misses Viola Cashman, Harriet Cheney and Muriel Gilbert assisted Pocahontas as Indian Maidens. In the second episode the Waukegan camp fire girls who took the parts of the daughters of the white men were Misses Emma Daniels, Mildred Knowles, Nettie Pritchard, Ruth Pritchard and May Elander.

The finale in the pageant was "The Nations" and all but one was represented by Waukegan Camp girls. Miss Mildred Knowles represented Great Britain; Miss May Elander, Sweden; Miss Viola Cashman, Spain; Miss Ruth Pritchard, Africa; Miss Nettie Pritchard, Italy.

Among those from town who visited the camp Saturday and Monday were Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Pritchard, Robert Pritchard, Mrs. Otto Buerle, Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Cheney, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Elander.

Athletic events were staged Saturday at the "Round Up" and Miss Ruth Pritchard won second place in the 25-yard dash. Her team won the relay race. Half run backward and half forward and second half entirely forward. The team included Misses Ruth Pritchard, Ellen Shattuck, Mabel Tenney, Helen Richardson, Margaret Luce, Dorothy Phinney, Dorothy Jones. The day closed with the most impressive and beautiful ceremony of the Camp Fire work, the solemn ritual of a ceremonial council fire. In the natural hollow about which the circle of tents is built is a stone fireplace, one stone from each New England State, and here the nine wood gatherers placed the fagots and built a fire. Then the director, Miss Elisabeth Taylor, from the hill over it issued the slow, dignified call of "We-lo" (we-love, love), and from the woods, to the tapping of a drum the Camp Fire Girls individually made their way through the trees to the council fire.

Ceremonial songs followed the statement of their desires, and girls were initiated as torch bearers, firemakers or members of the Camp Fire Circle, according to the grade they have attained during this last summer's work. Special honors, of colored beads, were awarded to many girls for extra work, the silver cups offered by the Kiwanis Club were awarded with ribbon prizes for first, second and third places in the individual events, and the council fire closed with the march of the Camp Fire Girls led by Columbia and Pocahontas, and camp songs.

No small part of the credit of the success of the Waukegan Camp Fire girls at Camp Greenwood goes to Miss Bigelow, their director, who has done much for the girls. A larger delegation plans to go to the New England council next year.

Essex Agricultural Fair at Topsfield Will Attract the Whole County

Unless all signs fail the coming 101st Annual Fair of the Essex Agricultural Society to be held at Topsfield, on September 21, 22, 23 will be the biggest event of its kind ever held in the County. The management is spending neither time nor money to put on a show of interest and value to every one, whether farmer or city dweller.

So many improvements have been made on the grounds that visitors will hardly know it is the same place. The new buildings this year include a fine barn for the draft horses and show horses, a race horse stable with 20 spacious box stalls, a large grandstand on the easterly side of the track, a splendid new dance hall and improved cash sheds.

Through the generosity of Thomas E. Proctor of Topsfield the new race track has been wonderfully improved by widening it and grading and a new permanent fence is being built around it. A new entrance is being built on the Maple street and Turnpike corner to accommodate the exhibitors and patrons who come on the train. All trains will stop at the Turnpike each day of the Fair.

In addition to the permanent buildings on the grounds it will take seven mammoth tents to house the Automobile Show, Farm Machinery and supply exhibits, the Poultry Show, Flower Show and Fruit and Vegetable displays. The Automobile Show itself will cover 800 feet of space and the Poultry Show, directed by Bertram Tomlinson and Leon Elanford of Haverhill, promises to be the biggest and best event of its kind ever held in Essex County. The Flower Show, under the direction of Mrs. B. Hammond Tracey of Cedar Acres, Wenham, will be worth going a long way to see, as she and her committee are working hard to make this part of the Show a big feature. The Grange Exhibits in the big hall always attract much interest and already several Granges have voted to exhibit this year. The Aparian Department under direction of Alfred Bunker of Lawrence is as busy as the proverbial bee and promises to show the visitors that the Bee Industry is not a lost art. The Junior Department under direction of Stanley DeQuoi of Hathorne will show what the young farmers of the county are doing and the Junior Contests, managed by Harold Millard of Hathorne will come in for their share of interest.

Auto and Ice Wagon Collide

Saturday afternoon James Bonner and Mrs. Bonner and son had a miraculous escape from injury when their auto collided with one of the Andover Ice Co.'s wagons at the corner of Park and Main streets.

Mr. Bonner was driving from Park to Main and did not see the ice team until he had rounded the corner at Crowley's drug store. He tried to avoid hitting the horses and drove his machine over into the part of the road under construction. The pole of the ice wagon smashed through the front of the car, crumpling up the hood and mud-guard on the right side and crashing through the windshield.

Ernest Olette, driver of the team, stopped his horses instantly, pulling both on their harnesses; but for his splendid control of the animal, one of which started to rear, there might have been serious injury to the occupants, all of whom escaped uninjured.

No Injunction in Andover Seminary Case

Judge Crosby of the Supreme Court has denied a preliminary injunction to restrain the amalgamation of Andover Theological Seminary and the Harvard Divinity school. In consequence of that decree the merger will take place as originally planned, but, if the petitioners are desirous of continuing their opposition to it, they will ask for a hearing on the merits of their claim and, if they should be sustained, then the consolidation will have to be dissolved.

The injunction was sought by the Visitors of the Theological Institute in Phillips Academy in Andover. They claimed that the union of schools was contrary to the wishes of the various donors of funds to it during the last one hundred and twenty-five odd years. Andover school was founded as an orthodox Congregational theological school, while Harvard was founded as a Unitarian theological school. The amalgamation would make the Harvard Divinity school a non-denominational school, which was to have been known as the Theological School of Harvard University.

Attorney Thomas Weston presented the case for the petitioners and Robert G. Dodge for the respondents. Mr. Dodge took the stand that the affiliation would in no way affect the Visitors of Andover from having control of the combined schools nor would it in any way prevent their professors from teaching the doctrines for which the Andover school was founded.

Republican Candidates Address Citizens

Town Hall square was a busy place Tuesday night when a number of Republican candidates for nomination at the State Primaries spoke and told why they should be chosen.

District Atty. S. Howard Donnell, candidate for Attorney General, was the first speaker and he was followed by Candidate Bailey for County Treasurer, and Romeo C. King of Lawrence, candidate for Senator. Atty. William McSweeney of Salem spoke in behalf of Candidate Donnell. There was a good-sized audience and considerable applause. It was the largest out-door rally held here for some time.

License Suspended

The license of Kachis Asolan of 14 Lowell street has been suspended by State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin, pending an investigation into an accident which occurred on Aug. 13 in Brighton, causing the death of Kacie Gambedian of that place.

The little girl was a niece of Asolan's and returning in her uncle's truck from an outing here. The truck was started and Rosie was thrown out, sustaining injuries which resulted in her death from concussion of the brain.

A new stump-burning method employed in Washington consists of placing an apparatus against the stump with a flue and blowpipe in position. A draft created by the blowpipe turns the inside of the stump into a mass of coals the fire eats down into the roots and the entire stump is consumed at half the cost of former methods.

The oldest post-office building in the United States is in St. Augustine, Florida. Records at Seville, Spain, show that the structure was erected some time between 1568 and 1603 by Gonzalo Mendez. The King of Spain bought it in 1604 for a residence of the Spanish governors of Florida.

Fined on Three Charges

Eugene Belanger of Lawrence was fined $60 on three counts, all violations of the auto laws, when he was convicted in Andover police court Tuesday afternoon before Judge Colver J. Stone. He was fined $20 on a charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, $20 on a charge of operating without a license and $20 on a charge of operating without registration plates.

The Andover police alleged that Belanger took the truck from the Shawheen garage late Monday night. A charge of breaking and entering the garage was placed on file.

Frequently it is difficult in a party contest to come to a clear-cut position where candidates for an office appear to be equally worthy. It grows increasingly difficult in many campaigns where the real issues involved are clouded by the type of material that the average campaign orator passes out. Few people know the real situation well enough to judge wisely; many people are led by prejudice and impulse, by a single catchword, by influences usually of very doubtful value.

For thirty-five years the Townsman has taken a positive position on political matters. Its editor has never knowingly misled the Andover public. If mistakes have been made they have not been mistakes of the heart. Never in that thirty-five years did the editor feel so keenly the importance of having an overwhelming defeat administered to any person as at the present time in connection with the contest for governorship. The charge has been foolishly made that the reason for the editor's interest is his relation to public service in the Commonwealth, and the effect that the success of any one other than the Governor would have upon his own fortunes as a State office holder. The complete answer to that statement is that the position now held by the editor of the Townsman will be filled under the law for a three years term on or before December 1, 1932, removing it entirely from the action of the Governor to be elected in November of this year.

In thirty years close contact with public service, and twenty years of intimate acquaintance with the chief executive of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, there has never been a governor with a record surpassing that of the present chief executive. Unexpected by those who aided in his election two years ago, his course has been as direct in purpose, as honest in intent, as high minded in every quality as the highest standards of Massachusetts could set. No politics, no personal advantage, no profit of any sort has ever been considered, with a result that Massachusetts is the only State in the Union that shows in the last two years a reduction in its debt, a lessened cost of government, a program of development for all of its great public works, a pay-as-you-go policy firmly established, and the hundred and one other achievements making up the supplement submitted to the people of Andover in last week's Townsman.

This is a great record, and it is the only record upon which the public should judge the merits of the man which so well justify his re-election. The question of defeat for the other man should not enter into this discussion, and will not be referred to here except to express the strong belief that almost the direct opposite as the moving force in everything that has been done by the present attorney-general counts him today as unworthy of the high office of Governor of Massachusetts.

The most emphatic answer to the fallacious charges, worked up by adroit attorneys for the creation of a background for the attorney-general as governor, with influence infinitely worse than any that has yet been known in control of this high office in Massachusetts, will be a majority for Governor Cox at the primaries next Tuesday, running into the hundreds of thousands of votes. There should be no mistaking the resentment that the public feels toward the type of campaign that has been waged by Governor Cox's opponent.

Senator Lodge will be re-elected. His great standing in the nation, his high place in the world's councils, his distinguished service for the Commonwealth make that sure.

The Townsman believes that some of the merit in the last administration belongs to others than the Governor, and among that group is the Lieutenant-Governor, who brought to this service all of the training of a skilled business man, making good in his own field of business endeavor, and using that training in a most emphatic way during the past two years as head of the finance committee of the Governor's Council. We don't believe that the issue here is the question of whether or not Mr. Warner did or did not suffer from charges that may have been made or may not have been made in a previous campaign by his opponent. The question is service that has been rendered by the present holder of this high office, giving promise of a continuance if he is re-elected. We believe Massachusetts is better served in the re-election of Lieutenant-Governor Fuller than by any change at this time.

Another high position to be filled is involved in the naming of a successor to the present attorney-general. Trained in his office as an assistant having charge of much of the important work of that department, the State is fortunate in being able to pick out of a large group who seek this position, Assistant Attorney-General Jay R. Benton. Young enough to have a fresh and clear-cut vision, and old enough to have a well-balanced mind, his legal training has been of the best, his legal experience has been broad, and his equipment makes him the logical and most satisfactory candidate for this position.

It is inconceivable that any headway can be made by the deposed former State Treasurer, Fred Burrell, in his attempt to come back into public life. The writer is confident that the voters of Massachusetts felt they had settled this gentleman's position for all time when he resigned under fire, when his connections with certain questionable banking institutions in Boston were shown up, and when it was necessary by stickers to nominate the present most efficient State Treasurer, James Jackson, as his successor. We can think of no greater misfortune that could come to the State than for any material number of citizens to give support to the renewed ambitions of Mr. Burrell. Plus the above there is the positive factor of the rare gain to the Commonwealth by having as one of its State officials a man of the ability, integrity and high standing that mark James Jackson, the citizen, and James Jackson, the Treasurer of the Commonwealth.

The town has few local contests. Its own Representative, Dr. Abbott, is to go back again unopposed, a splendid tribute to a man who has made an excellent record and may be thoroughly trusted to better it the coming two years.

In the district there is a pretty warm fight for the Republican nomination for Senator. Methuen sends a candidate in the person of her only mayor, Mr. Rushton; Lawrence has two candidates, one with legislative experience as a representative, the other with training that should give him no consideration whatsoever. North Andover appeals for the vote of Andover through two former representatives, Messrs. Holt and Robertson. It is pretty difficult to pick the winner out of this group. Without doubt the larger part of the Andover vote will be divided between Messrs. Holt and Robertson, but there is considerable evidence that the larger interest of the district will center upon Representative Kerr of Lawrence, and if it does he will make an excellent representative in the higher branch of the State Legislature.

Several county contests are proceeding at a pretty rapid pace. A number of men are seeking the nomination for district attorney, and so far as can be seen several of them are well fitted for the work. Here again, however, it seems to be a most reasonable and natural thing to promote an assistant if he has been an efficient man. The district appears to have had such a man in the person of Assistant District Attorney Clark who has been doing a large part of the work of the district attorney's office during the past three years. Mr. Clark comes from Gloucester, is an excellent lawyer, is spoken of very highly by his own people, and appears deserving of a broad county interest.

The long agitation over the manner in which the county commission has been carrying on its work now focuses itself upon the re-election of the chairman of the board, John N. Grosvenor, Jr., of Lynn. Mr. Grosvenor is opposed by Senator Trefry of Marblehead, a young man of excellent parts but with no experience whatsoever in county affairs.

Carrying on the County of Essex has become a pretty big job. We have not agreed with many things that the commissioners have done in recent years, and we believe they have been rather extravagant, but after all it is pretty difficult to say whether their extravagance represents anything except the demand made by the public for particular things calling for the expenditure of a lot of money. Mr. Grosvenor is a very efficient man. He knows more about the County of Essex than any single man in the county, has had long training in public work, and ought to be re-elected, as certainly the sum of his good things is much greater than any possible combination of errors that he may have committed.

The county is fortunate in having available a man so well equipped for the duties of the office of County Treasurer as Charles O. Bailey of Newbury. He knows Essex County. He is acquainted with the county's problems. He has been tested in many responsible places and will make a most efficient custodian of the county's funds.

In this particular district there is a local position in which we are all concerned, but which we know very little about. The position of Register of Deeds is referred to. The job seems to go naturally to somebody in Lawrence, and at present appears to be headed toward Harry C. Chubb. Mr. Chubb is well known to some Andover people, who speak highly of him, and his nomination ought not to be in doubt.

Above and beyond all individuals, however, there is the real duty for every voter to go to the polls and vote at the primary next Tuesday.

A Great Gift from Mr. Wood

Andover should be very happy over what appears to be a most satisfactory clean-up of the school situation in Shawheen Village, as will be made clear by correspondence published in another column. Mr. Wood has presented on the part of the American Woolen Company a most desirable location for the new building. The committee having in charge the approval of this site will be unanimous and hearty in recommending this for acceptance by the town. The next thing is a modern building to fit itself properly in with the atmosphere of Shawheen Village.

There is no need to review the situation from the standpoint of the difficulties that have been encountered before reaching this solution. Suffice it to say that in all the study and investigation there has been foreshadowed an attitude on the part of Mr. Wood that was refreshing to all who have had to do with the problem.

Congratulations to the committee and heartiest thanks to the American Woolen Company and its honored President, in their fine attitude toward the town.

The selectmen have ordered Main street between Park street and Elm square a one-way street, entering from Park. This action was taken following the accident Saturday afternoon when James Bonner's auto and a team of the People's Ice Company collided. Traffic from the square toward the town house is now diverted via Elm street and Florence street. This arrangement will continue until the business section of Main street has been reconstructed.

FINNERAN - DUGAN

A pretty wedding took place Wednesday afternoon at 6 o'clock in St. Augustine's church when Miss Eleanor A. Dugan, daughter of Martin Dugan, was married to Joseph Finneran of Lawrence. The ceremony was performed by Very Rev. Fr. Charles M. Driscoll, assistant-general of the Augustinian Order in Rome. Fr. Driscoll performed the ceremony at the marriage of the bride's parents, and is a cousin of the bride. Within the sanctuary were Rev. John A. Nugent, pastor of the church; Rev. Frederick S. Riordan of St. Lawrence's church, Lawrence; Rev. P. J. Campbell and Rev. T. J. Fogarty.

Miss Annie G. Donovan, organist at the church, played the wedding march from Lohengrin as the bridal party marched down the aisle. The altar decorations were pink and white asters and hydrangeas. Miss Agnes V. Dugan, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Arthur Kelley of Lawrence was best man. The ushers were John L. Dugan, brother of the bride; Raymond MacIntosh, a cousin; William Donovan of Lawrence, cousin of the bridegroom, and William Milles of Lawrence.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of mole-skin crepe with sash and trimmings from her mother's wedding dress. Her bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore pink georgette over satin and a hat to match. She carried Ophelia roses.

A reception followed at the home on Maple avenue, and guests were present from Maine, Philadelphia, Boston, Providence, New York, Lawrence and the Andovers. The house decorations were of asters, hydrangeas, palms and clematis. Music was provided by O'Sullivan's orchestra of Lawrence. The bride and groom were accompanied by the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Finneran received a great array of beautiful wedding gifts. The bride is well known here, and is a graduate of the Pynchard school. She has been a stenographer in the law offices of Edward L. Arundel, Lawrence. The bridegroom is a well-known clerk in Keegan's drug store, Lawrence.

After a wedding trip to Washington and Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Finneran will be at home after December 1 at Sanborn street, South Lawrence.

Obituary
DR. FRANK DREW

Dr. Frank Drew of 36 Salem street died at his home last Friday morning, September 1, after a long illness. He was born in Bunker Hill, Ill., October 18, 1858 and was graduated from Indiana University in 1880. In the following year he received the degree of A.M. from his Alma Mater and in 1895 the degree of Ph.D. from Clark University.

Dr. Drew was teacher of psychology and pedagogy in the State Normal School at Worcester from 1896 to 1908. Subsequently he was superintendent of schools in the Granville district in Western Massachusetts, and then professor of pedagogy at the State Normal School at Indiana, Penn. Failing health compelled him to resign this latter position in 1914, since which time he has resided in Andover.

Mr. Drew was married in 1899 to Miss E. Louise Richards of Danvers, who died in Andover in November, 1914. He is survived by one son, Austin Richards Drew, and several brothers and sisters, one of whom resides in Boston, the others in the West.

In addition to psychology and pedagogy Mr. Drew was specially interested and widely read in natural history. His interest in botany, insects, birds and all forms of nature as well as in education, philosophy and current events tended to alleviate the restrictions of his ever-increasing infirmities. He was a member of the Central Congregational Church of Worcester and had served as a deacon of the church for a number of years. The funeral service was held at his late home on Salem street Monday afternoon, and was conducted by the Rev. Frederick A. Wilson. Interment was in Danvers.

Beauty Parlor Opened on Essex Street

A beauty parlor conducted by Mrs. Jeannette Roche and Mrs. B. R. Fallon opened for business this week in the new brick block on Essex street opposite the post office, under the name of Jeannette's Beauty Parlor.

Mrs. Fallon has had fifteen years' experience in New York and Boston and is well versed in all branches of the business. She conducted a business of her own in Boston before coming to Andover.

Her daughter, Mrs. Roche, has also had considerable experience, having been employed for several years in Desousa's hair-dressing parlors in Boston. She has recently made her home at 48 Chestnut street and already has many customers in this town.

The parlors are attractively furnished with rose colored rugs and curtains and wicker furniture. There are three booths for the accommodation of customers.

Dr. Conroy Establishes Prize Fund

Dr. Edward C. Conroy of the school committee has placed two funds in trust to perpetuate prizes which he has been giving for some years to students at the Pynchard high school for special effort, and also to pupils of St. Augustine's parochial school.

Tuesday night at the meeting of the school committee the offer of Dr. Conroy was read by the secretary, and the board unanimously accepted the gift with a rising vote of thanks.

Three prizes will be possible annually, one to the student showing the greatest effort; one to the student for the best theme written in the school, and a third prize to be awarded at the discretion of the principal and faculty.

Dr. Conroy's letter was as follows:

Andover, Sept. 5

Secretary of the Andover School Committee: Dear Sir—

It gives me great pleasure to perpetuate the prizes I have been giving for some years to the pupils of the Pynchard high school. I have placed a fund in trust for the following purposes:

To give a first prize of a five-dollar gold piece to the pupil in the freshman class of the Pynchard high school who shows the greatest effort in studies during the year.

To give a second prize of a five-dollar gold piece to the pupil of the graduating class who writes the best theme, under the following conditions:

The principal to announce the subject and the pupils to write the themes before leaving the building.

A third prize, the balance of the annual interest of the fund, to be given at the discretion of the principal and faculty of the high school.

I hope that these prizes will be a source of help and pleasure to the pupils.

Sincerely yours
EDWARD C. CONROY

A similar gift has been made by Dr. Conroy for the pupils of St. Augustine's parochial school, and the offer to Fr. Nugent announcing the establishing of a fund follows:

Andover, Sept. 5

Rev. John A. Nugent, O.S.A.: Dear Father Nugent—

I want to perpetuate the prizes which I have been giving to St. Augustine's school for some years, and I have placed a fund in trust for the following purposes:

To give annually a five-dollar gold piece to the boy and to the girl who show the greatest effort during the year.

The balance of the interest to be given as a third prize at the discretion of the pastor.

I hope that these prizes may be a source of help and pleasure to the pupils.

Cordially yours,
EDWARD C. CONROY

Dr. Conroy has served as a member of the school committee for twelve years and for three years acted as its chairman. For several years he has taken pleasure in offering prizes to the children for excellence in their work, and has taken this means of perpetuating his gifts.

Dr. Conroy was born in Ireland and received his education in this country, graduating from Loyola college, Baltimore, with the degree of A.B., and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1897 at the University of Maryland. Dr. Conroy has been in Andover for nearly twenty years and is one of the town's most respected citizens.

PHILLIPS OPENS TUESDAY

the outside construction before the end of the year.

There is still some question as to the location of the Case Memorial baseball cage, or indoor playground, plans for which were completed some time ago, but it will in all probability be situated due east of the gymnasium, a location which will necessitate a slight change in the layout of Highland road, from Salem street to Main street.

The Clark House, will be in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Allen, and as formerly will accommodate several students. So great has been the demands upon the Phillips dining hall, that it has been found necessary to provide for some overflow, and the Academy plans to maintain a dining hall at the Clark House. While Mr. and Mrs. Allen will have charge of the meals served there, it will be under the direct supervision of the Phillips dining hall authorities.

The grading which is at present underway around Johnson hall, the new dormitory, will necessitate the removal of several tennis courts, but these will be replaced in Brothers field at the earliest opportunity.

Very few changes have been made in the personnel of the faculty. One member returns from a leave of absence, and another begins one. Two members of the faculty will leave, and two new instructors have been added to the list.

Rev. Markham W. Stockpole, who has been school minister for the last 15 years, will not be at the Academy this year, and as yet, no provisions have been made for filling the position which he leaves vacant. During the coming year, he will reside in Milton, Mass.

Waldo E. Palmer, who was appointed instructor in Mathematics last year, Amherst 1921, leaves to take post graduate work, and his place will be taken by J. Harold Sample of Yale.

Another instructor comes to Phillips from Yale, James W. Williams, a prominent man in college throughout his course, and a graduate of Phillips. Since his graduation from Yale in 1908, Mr. Williams has been teaching at Yale College at Champaign, China. Mr. Williams will teach Mr. Stockpole's courses in English Bible and will also have charge of two sections in English.

Professor Charles H. Forbes has accepted the offer of the board of trustees of a well-deserved leave of absence for the coming year, the greater part of which he intends to spend in travel abroad, where he will probably be accompanied by Mrs. Forbes. His leave is made possible by the return of Horace M. Poynter who completes a year's leave this fall and who is also a member of the Latin department of the school.

Coach Alec Sutherland, who has had charge of Phillips teams for 9 years, is not returning this fall. He will probably continue teaching in another institution.

The work of the new year will begin next week according to the following schedule:

September 11, Monday; Dormitories and private house open for occupancy.

September 12, Tuesday; 9 a.m., Chapel followed by entrance examinations.

September 13, Wednesday; 7:45 a.m. Exercises begin.

September 14, Thursday; 7:45 a.m., Exercises begin for the two upper classes.

F. J. Hamelin Holds Rally in Andover

Councillor Fred J. Hamelin of Lynn, candidate for the Republican nomination for District Attorney in Andover last night held a rally in Andover square. Accompanying Mr. Hamelin were ten machines filled with singers, a small army of speakers, music and red fire.

Mr. Hamelin vigorously attacked the County machine which he claims is in back of Mr. Clark's candidacy, and pleaded with the voters of Andover to keep the district attorney's office out of politics by casting their vote for him on next Tuesday.

He pledged himself that the door to his office would always be open and that anyone, be he humble or rich, who should need the aid of the district attorney could go to him, without being forced to hire a high-priced lawyer before he would listen to their case.

Other speakers with Mr. Hamelin in his tour to this town were William Cochran, president of the Lynn City Council, Edward I. Jewett, county labor organizer, Harry J. Ryan and Michael J. Leonard, Lynn labor leaders. These men told of the work accomplished by Candidate Hamelin in the City Council in Lynn and urged the voters to remember him when they went to the polls on Tuesday next.

Praise Governor Cox

The following letter taken from the Boston Herald of Thursday should be of interest to local voters:

To the Editor of The Herald:

Being prevented by physical disability from taking an active part in the campaign for the renomination of Gov. Cox, I crave the privilege of expressing through The Her Id my earnest hope that the citizens of Massachusetts will honor themselves and recognize the high type of public service rendered by Channing H. Cox by renominating and re-electing him for a second term as Governor.

I believe that he is entitled to this recognition, because of his blameless and efficient record as a public servant, and particularly his record as Governor during the past two years; because while maintaining the high traditions and dignity of his office, he has considered himself the people's representative, and has always been at their service in a spirit of genuine democracy; because of the spirit in which he has conducted his campaign, meeting every attack of his opponent with such fairness, frankness, fearlessness and ability that he has won the support of many who were previously undecided.

Massachusetts cannot afford to establish a one-term precedent for Governor, which seems to be the only plank left in his opponent's platform.

Let the citizens of our state on Sept. 12, give such a unanimous endorsement of Gov. Cox's faithful service that it will be a stimulus to all our public servants to render similar service, with the assurance that it will not go unrecognized and unrewarded.

WILLIAM SHAW.

TO THE SINGERS

We elder folk, whose you here
Before you turn the page
While we forget in youth brought near
The difference of our age!
Those years compact of good and bad
We call the time! What splendor
Returns to make us truly glad
If once we may surrender
Our ancient, fussy, fussy ways
And live again the story
Of schooltime work and schooltime plays
In epochs you'd call happy!

Yet then, as now, 'twas bliss to fret
About the lessons "awful"
That no one but a "teacher's pet"
Would dare consider awful!
And then (as now) come braggart sons,
All devious and breezy,
Would boast, "Ten minutes—had it done!
O that, I call it easy!"

And then, as now, were roads that led
From text-books worn and barred!
Through pleasing things that some one said
When leisurely we tarried.
To ramble far—O far—away
From chalk and conjugations,
And odd "exceptions" gone astray
From all their weird relations!
When Caesar conquered ancient Gaul
We heard the Mötley chapter
Where fearless Mervil must fall
Read by a wise professor.
O yet come back heroic thrill!
Yet the old bridge is bitter!
(Pons asinorum—is it still?)
Ted gave it up—a quitter!

Upon our stage we couched a lance
And speared the doughty Arab;
Then did a real Egyptian dance,
Decked in the (home-made) scarab.
Our beads (contrived of sealing-wax),
Our costumes (made of paper),
The wigs we sewed from hemp and flax
(Mine scorched at Emma's taper),
Were poetry and high romance
That made our noses quiver;
What base electric can enhance
Our footlight-candle's flicker!
What gleam of gems in splendid guise
Our glow of wax light smothered!
What actors meet such proud surprise
From sympathetic mother!

Do you too dream by hedge and stone
And hum in hidden byways,
Setting to mystic charms—your own—
The secrets of the highways?
Ah me—those thoughts that never grew
To find aloud expression
Will make you all your lifetime through,
Be still your dear obsession!

And this is true—Olympians know—
You'll ease a grown-up hunger
With pleasant songs that long ago
You sang when you were younger!

"To the Singers" is the rhymed preface to the new "Rainbow Song Book" with verse written by Adele Marie Shaw, a graduate of the Pynchard school in the class of 1881. Those who attended school in the early Eighties will recognize Emma and Ted as their own schoolmates. The lines may also serve to recall the incidents to which she alludes and the days when lessons were varied by exhibitions and "shows" based on schoolroom tasks.

The Townsman

Color a Feature of New Trimmings

Fancy beaded net bands and large, beaded fringe motifs stand out as the marked note in trimmings for the fall models. Belts are practically nonexistent in the new line, and are replaced by elaborate motifs and buckles, all of which have been chosen by the leading model garment makers for their new fall models.

Fancy braids and fancy net bands, notably bands heavily beaded in brilliant, multi-colored beads in Roumanian and Bulgarian designs, promise to be one of the great successes of the season. These bands are shown in such color combinations as scarlet, yellow, and blue, interspersed with white on a black net ground, in shades of dark and brilliant red interspersed with blue, or again in combinations of green, blue and yellow.

In buckles, marked emphasis is given to disks in composition mounted in fancy filigree frames. Many of these are in Egyptian designs, and are ornamented at the center with a metal sphinx head matching the frame.

A good line of beaded georgette evening dresses is also shown by David and Bacus, notably white georgette beaded in crystal, or in iridescent, or in mother-of-pearl effects.

White for evening wear stands out as the dominating note for gowns, and also for trimmings and accessories.—Dry Goods Economist.

One hundred and thirty-six thousand, four hundred and forty-one boys and girls were enrolled in agricultural extension clubs in 1921 for training in various phases of livestock work. These junior farmers owned, last year, 76,148 head of farm animals and 554,286 fowls, representing a total value of $3,605,176.

Gasoline Tax Urged to Aid Road Building

"Forty million dollars annually can be raised for road building and maintenance by a tax of 1 cent a gallon on gasoline." This statement was made recently by Thomas H. MacDonald, Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, in urging a readjustment of sources of revenue so that a larger proportion would be paid by the road user and a lesser percentage from State or local taxes.

"This method of raising funds," declared Mr. MacDonald, "is rapidly growing in favor and has been adopted in Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Montana, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, and Washington. Of these States, only Oregon, New Mexico, Colorado, and Kentucky had such a tax prior to January 1, 1921. The tax in Maryland, Mississippi, and South Carolina has been adopted during the present year and several other States are considering such a tax."

Troop 1 of Stoneham Spent Week End Here

Troop 1, Boy Scouts of Stoneham, spent the week-end and Labor Day in town, camping on Academy Lot Hill, near Lowell junction.

The troop was in charge of Deputy Commissioner Orvis H. Saxby and Assistant Master Harold C. Hurd, who have had much experience with boys and out-of-door life.

The happy crew arrived here on Saturday afternoon and at once set up camp, which took most of the afternoon. In the evening they marched here and bought whatever they needed and at the call of Bugler Graton formed and marched back to camp.

The day's routine was as follows: 6:45 a.m., reveille; 7 a.m., flag raising; 8 a.m., mess; 9 a.m., camp police duty; 10 a.m., hike; 12:30 p.m., mess; 1:30 p.m., hike; 4 p.m., camp police duty; 5 p.m., mess; 6 p.m., scouts at liberty; 9:45 p.m., taps.

The Willing Workers society of the Methodist church held its regular monthly business meeting in the church vestry Monday evening with the president, Ben Nason, in the chair.

Married Men Defeat Single Men

Labor Day morning the married men lined up against the single men on the local playground and defeated them by the time of 9 to 3, in an interesting game of baseball.

Until the latter part of the game, the single men were unable to score off Fred Wrigley's delivery, but in their half of the eighth bunched a couple of hits and scored three runs.

Henry Platt, an old-time first baseman, played up to his old-time standard and, by a well-planned, disordered, nervous, inefficient line, and is meanwhile rushing the undertaker!

For the single men Harry Murphy got a two-base hit. Joe Stevenson played a good game at catch.

The game was called on account of rain after the first half of the eighth inning had been played.

It is the first time in years that the married men have won the $10.00 prize offered by the Fourth of July Celebration Committee. The lineup:

Married men—Bill Riley c., Fred Wrigley p., Henry Platt lb., Harry Wrigley 2b., Harold Wells s.s., Ben Dane 3b., Clifford Wrigley l.f., John McIntyre c.f., Fred Coffin r.f.

Fishing Trip off Beverly

Sunday was an ideal day for deep sea fishing and at 7.15 a.m. sharp nineteen local fishermen started by truck for Beverly and arrived there at 10 o'clock. Immediately upon arrival they put out in Captain John Johnson's fishing ship to the fishing grounds in the vicinity of Baker's Island.

Among those present were men who had never been deep sea fishing before, and they, as luck would have it, caught more fish than the old-timers. Among them was Louis Kibbee, who won the prize for catching the largest fish, which was a large cod. Besides catching the largest fish, he also caught the largest number. The prize awarded was $8.

Those present were: Frank Cronin, Louis Wrigley, Fred Wrigley, Ed Greulich, John Platt, Joe Platt, Louis Kibbee, Bob Ryan, Hugh McGovern, Guy Conkey, Howard Colbath, Harold Bixby, Harry Colbath, James Fee, Mike Flaherty, Steve Castle, Walter Troutman, Bill Maddock, James Moss.

Union Good Templar Outing

In spite of the rain there was a good crowd at the union outing of Ballardvale and Brook lodges held at Camp Dirigo on the Shawheen on Labor Day. Over one hundred Good Templars and their friends marched from Good Templar hall to the camp, with Marshal William MacDonald carrying the lodge banner. Pipe Major William White of Clan Johnston, Andover, in uniform, played the bagpipes. Many people saluted all along the way.

Soon after they arrived at the camp it began to rain, and it was thought best to go back to Good Templar hall and have the dinner there, and although it delayed matters some, everybody enjoyed the fish dinner, and all the more for having to wait a little longer for it. It was one of the best ever served by the lodge, with the following committee in charge from Ballardvale lodge: Mrs. Daniel H. Pusey, Mrs. Frances Benson and Mrs. David Wilkinson; and from Brook lodge, Methuen, Miss Elsie Carter, Mrs. Alec. Lown and Mrs. Naman.

After dinner all had a good social time and when it cleared up part of the races for the younger folks were carried out, but the rest of the races and the baseball game between the two lodges had to be given up.

The following were winners in the races held:

75-yard dash for boys—First, Thomas McGovern; second, Norman Kibbee.

75-yard dash for girls—First, Edna McGovern; second, Bessie Brown.

25-yard dash for small children—Margaret Benson.

Skipping rope contest was won by Edna McGovern.

Mrs. Phoebe Brown won the clam-eating contest, much to the surprise of several former champions.

Local Scouts Beat Troop 1 of Cambridge

The combined Eagle and Beaver Troops of Boy Scouts defeated the Troop 1 of Cambridge on the local playground Saturday afternoon, by the score of 14 to 11.

Each team had its best men on the field and they were evenly matched, both playing good ball.

The main feature of the game was the one-hand catch made by George Lawrence. Parker of the Cambridge Troop also starred.

The lineup: Local Scouts—Harold Wells c. and p., Joe Stevenson p. and c., Ed Bonne c., Ed Greulich lb., Richard Wrigley 3b., Clyde Mears 2b., Irving Moss r.f., Robert MacDonald l.f., Bill Bonner r.f., George Lawrence c.f.

Cambridge Scouts—A. Bradford c., Andy Southernland 3b., Ray Parker s.s., p., E. Morrill p., 3b., C. Sherman 2b., Bill Downe lb., D. Woodside c.f., H. Wrightson r.f. Andy Francoeur l.f.

Hurry

Hurry is a chronic American disease, an evil habit that has fastened itself cancer-like, on our life, and has sent its roots deep down into our vitals.

Hurry is not speed. It is not energy. It is not the opposite of slothfulness. It is not a means by which great ends are accomplished.

A study of the men of affairs, who have made, or are making, history, will demonstrate that hurry is not a characteristic of the man who is doing things worth while.

There are exceptions, of course, but almost invariably the man of affairs is deliberate. He accomplishes much, but he does it calmly, measuredly, and according to schedule.

His schedule is so planned, perhaps, that every moment of the working day is assigned but there is sufficient time for each task when its time comes. He does not hurry.

The hurrying man is one who, with immature plans, is trying to keep up with a poorly arranged schedule, and is always a little behind.

Hurry, because it involves lost motion, makes for inefficiency.

Some men imagine that hurry is a virtue, that their feverish activities help to keep them in the line.

Such activities may impress some persons, but not those who read below the surface.

Among the most reprehensible of the hurry tribe are those to whom traffic rules are anathema, and who are willing to take long chances to save ten minutes in a trip to or from town.

It is in this class that furnishes the daily menu of automobile casualties.

Perhaps the most effectual punishment for this type of individual would be to give the traffic officers authority to order every speeding car to the side of the road, and there padlock it for half an hour, or more, according to the gravity of the offense.

Another class of the hurrier who, however, injure only himself, orders and eats his meals with a rush.

One chef is quoted as saying that the curse of American cooking is the injunction, "Rush this order, please." Neither good preparation of food nor good digestion goes with such an order.

Whoever is living a hurried life is living a poorly planned, disordered, nervous, inefficient life, and is meanwhile rushing the undertaker!

Shoe Openings Showing Hoisery now Filled In

Shoes, for fall, it would seem, have undergone some quite distinct changes, in keeping with the rather radical modification in women's outer garments.

Generally speaking, there is still quite a large demand for strap pumps of various kinds but the newer styles have the openings filled in rather than having the hoisery show through as during the past season. Oxford shoes appear to be again coming into favor and some men predict quite a large vogue for them by late fall or early spring.

In distinct novelties the fancy colored heels have given way to the use of contrasting leathers and in many cases the effect is most interesting and attractive.—Dry Goods Economist.

SYNOPSIS

I-APRIL.—General factotum in the house of her sister Ina, wife of Herbert Deacon, in the small town of Warbleton. Lulu Bett leads a dull, cramped existence, with which she is constantly at odds, though apparently satisfied with her lot. She has natural thoughts and aspirations which neither her sister nor her brother-in-law seemingly can comprehend. To Mr. Deacon comes Bobby Larkin, recently graduated high-school youth, secretly enamored of Deacon's elder daughter, Diana, an applicant for a "job" around the Deacon house. He is engaged, his occupation to be to keep the lawn in trim. The family is excited over the news of an approaching visit from Deacon's brother Ninian, whom he had not seen for many years. Deacon jokes with Lulu, with subtle meaning, concerning the coming meeting.

II-MAY.—Chiefly because of the ripple in her placid, colorless existence which the arrival of Ninian will bring, Lulu is interested and speculative, meanwhile watching with something like envy the boy-and-girl love-making of Bobby and Diana. Unexpectedly, Ninian arrives, in the absence of Herbert, at his business, and of Ina, reading. Thus he becomes acquainted with Lulu first and in a measure understands her position in the house. To Lulu, Ninian is a much-traveled man of the world and even the slight interest which he takes in her is appreciated, because it is something new in her life.

III-JUNE.—At an outing which the family takes, Ninian and Lulu become in a measure confidential. He expresses his disapproval of her treatment as a sort of dependent in the Deacon home. Lulu has vaguely had the same thoughts, but her loyalty to her sister and her own diffidence make Ninian's comments embarrassing. He declares his intention of giving the family a "good time" in the city before he leaves. Diana and Bobby, in the course of "soft nothings," discuss the possibility of eloping and "surprising the whole school." Lulu, despite herself, has awakened to pleasant possibilities concerning Ninian's intentions toward herself, the more so because hitherto she has been a practical nonentity in the household, having little to do with its simple social functions. The fact that Ninian had walked home with her causes all sorts of speculations to disturb her slumbers that night.

IV-JULY.—Ninian redeems his promise of a "good time," and dinner in the adjacent city, with the attentions shown her by her brother-in-law, is a delight to Lulu. At supper, after the theater, the conversation languishes, and Herbert banteringly suggests reading the funeral service as a rebuke for the dullness. Ninian apparently jokingly urges the substitution of the wedding service, himself and Lulu participating. As part of the joke Lulu repeats the words of the civil ceremony, with Ninian. The laughter subsiding, Herbert remembers that a civil wedding is binding in the state, and inasmuch as he is a magistrate, Ninian and Lulu are legally wedded. The rest of the party is shocked, but Nina, observing as is perfectly satisfied. Lulu is dumfounded but secretly happy. She and Ninian depart at once for their honeymoon, without returning to Warbleton. The Deacons lose no time spreading the news in the home town, though the services of Lulu are sadly missed in the household.

Chapter V Continued

"My dear Lulu," Dwight said impatiently, "you are not the one to write. Have you no delicacy?"

Lulu smiled—a strange smile, originating and dying in one corner of her mouth.

"Yes," she said, "So much delicacy that I want to be sure whether I'm married or not."

Dwight cleared his throat with a movement which seemed to use his shoulders for the purpose.

"I myself will take this up with my brother," he said. "I will write to him about it."

Lulu sprang to her feet. "Write to him now!" she cried.

"Really," said Dwight, lifting his brows.

"Now—now!" Lulu said. She moved about, collecting writing materials from their casual lodgments on shelf and table. She set all before him and stood by him. "Write him now," she said again.

"My dear Lulu, don't be absurd."

She said: "Ina, help me. If it was Dwight—and they didn't know whether he had another wife, or not, and you wanted to ask him—oh, don't you see? Help me."

Ina was not yet the woman to cry for justice for its own sake, nor even to stand by another woman. She was primitive, and her instinct was to look to her own male merely.

"Well," she said, "of course. But why not let Dwight do it in his own way? Wouldn't that be better?"

She put it to her sister fairly: Now, no matter what Dwight's way was, wouldn't that be better?

"Mother!" said Lulu. She looked irresolutely toward her mother. But Mrs. Bett was eating caradon seeds with exceeding gusto, and Lulu looked away. Caught by the gesture, Mrs. Bett voiced her grievance.

"Lulu," she said, "Set down. Take off your hat, why don't you?"

Lulu turned upon Dwight a quiet face which he had never seen before.

"You write that letter to Ninian," she said, "and you make him tell you so you'll understand. I know he spoke the truth. But I want you to know."

"M-m," said Dwight. "And then I suppose you're going to tell it all over town—as soon as you have the proofs."

"I'm going to tell it all over town," said Lulu, "just as it is—unless you write to him now."

"Lulu!" cried Ina. "Oh, you wouldn't."

"I would," said Lulu. "I will."

Dwight was sobered. This unimagined Lulu—looked capable of it. But then he sneered.

"And get turned out of this house, as you would be?"

"Dwight!" cried his Ina. "Oh, you wouldn't!"

"I would," said Dwight. "I will. Lulu knows it."

"I shall tell what I know and then leave your house anyway," said Lulu, "unless you get Ninian's word. And I want you should write him now."

"Leave your mother? And Ina?" he asked.

"Leave everything," said Lulu.

"Oh, Dwight," said Ina, "we can't get along without Lulu." She did not say in what particulars, but Dwight knew.

Dwight looked at Lulu, an upward, sidewise look, with a manner of peering out to see if she meant it. And he saw.

He shrugged, pursed his lips crookedly, rolled his head to signify the inexpressible. "Isn't that like a woman?" he demanded. He rose. "Rather than let you in for a show of temper," he said grandly, "I do anything."

He wrote the letter, addressed it, his hand elaborately crouched in secrecy about the envelope, pocketed it.

"Ina and I'll walk down with you to mail it," said Lulu.

Dwight hesitated, frowned. His Ina watched him with consulting brows.

"I was going," said Dwight, "to propose a little stroll before bedtime."

He roved about the room. "Where's my beautiful straw hat? There's nothing like a brisk walk to induce sound, restful sleep," he told them. He hummed a bar.

"You'll be all right, mother?" Lulu asked.

Mrs. Bett did not look up. "These cardamon he's got a little mite too dry," she said.

In their room, Ina and Dwight discussed the incredible actions of Lulu.

"I saw," said Dwight. "I saw she wasn't herself. I'd do anything to avoid having a scene—you know that." His glance swept a little anxiously his Ina. "You know that, don't you?" he sharply inquired.

"But I really think you ought to have written to Ninian about it," she now dared to say. "It's not a nice position for Lulu."

"Nice? Well, but whom has she got to blame for it?"

"Why, Ninian," said Ina.

Dwight threw out his hands. "Herself," he said. "To tell you the truth, I was perfectly amused at the way she snapped him up there in that restaurant."

"Why, but, Dwight—"

"Brazen," he said. "Oh, it was brazen."

"It was just fun, in the first place."

"But no really nice woman—" he shook his head.

"Dwight! Lulu is nice. The idea!" He regarded her. "Would you have done that?" he would know.

Under his fond look, she softened.

took his homage, accepted everything, was silent.

"Certainly not," he said. "Lulu's tastes are not fine like yours. I should never think of you as sisters."

"She's awfully good," Ina said, feebly. Fifteen years of married life behind her—but this was sweet and she could not resist.

"She has excellent qualities." He admitted it. "But look at the position she's in—married to a man who tells her he has another wife in order to get free. Now, no really nice woman—"

"No really nice man—" Ina did say that much.

"Ah," said Dwight, "but you could never be in such a position. No, no. Lulu is sadly lacking somewhere."

Ina sighed, threw back her head, caught her lower lip with her upper, as might be in a hem. "What if it was Di?" she supposed.

"Di!" Dwight's look rebuked his wife. "Di," he said, "was born with ladylike feelings."

It was not yet ten o'clock. Bobby Larkin was permitted to stay until then. From the veranda came the indistinguishable murmur of those young voices.

"Bobby," Di was saying within that murmur, "Bobby, you don't kiss me as if you really wanted to kiss me, tonight."

VI

September.

The office of Dwight Herbert Deacon, Dentist, Gold Work a Specialty (sic) in black lettering, and Justice of the Peace in gold, was above a store which had been occupied by one unlucky tenant after another, and had suffered long periods of vacancy when ladies' aid societies served lunches there, under great white signs, badly lettered. Some months of disuse were now broken by the news that the store had been let to a music man. A music man, what on earth was that? Warbleton inquired.

The music man arrived, installed three pianos, and filled his window with sheet music, as sung by many ladies who swung in hammocks or kissed their hands on the music covers. While he was still moving in, Dwight Herbert Deacon wandered downstairs and stood informally in the door of the new store. The music man, a pleasant-faced chap of thirty-odd, was rubbing at the face of a piano.

"Hello, there!" he said. "Can I sell you an upright?"

"If I can take it out in pulling your teeth, you can," Dwight replied. "Or," said he, "I might marry you free, either one."

On this their friendship began. Thenceforth, when business was dull, the idle hours of both men were beguiled with idle gossip.

"How the dickens did you think of pianos for a line?" Dwight asked him once. "Now, my father was a dentist, so I came by it natural—never entered my head to be anything else. But pianos—"

The music man—his name was Neil Cornish—threw up his chin in a boyish fashion, and said he'd be jiggered if he knew. All up and down the Warbleton main street, the chances are that the answer would sound the same. "I'm studying law when I get the chance," said Cornish, as one who makes a bid to be thought of more highly.

"I see," said Dwight, respectfully dwelling on the verb.

Later on, Cornish confided more to Dwight: He was to come by a little inheritance some day.

Inheritance some day—not much, but something. Yes, it made a man feel a certain confidence.

"Don't it?" said Dwight, heartily, as if he knew.

Every one liked Cornish. He told funny stories, and he never compared Warbleton save to its advantage. So at last Dwight said tentatively at lunch:

"What if I brought that Neil Cornish up for supper one of these nights?"

"Oh, Dwight, do," said Ina. "If there's a man in town, let's know it."

"What if I brought him up tonight?" Up went Ina's eyebrows. Tonight!

"Scalloped potatoes and meat loaf and sauce and bread and butter," Lulu contributed.

Cornish came to supper. He was what is known in Warbleton as dapper. This Ina saw as she emerged on the veranda in response to Dwight's informal halloo on his way upstairs.

She herself was in white muslin, now much too snug, and a blue ribbon. But her greeting their guest repelled in that engaging shyness which is not awkwardness. He moved in some pleasant web of gentleness and friendliness.

They asked him the usual questions, and he replied, rocking all the time with a faint undulating motion of head and shoulders: Warbleton was one of the prettiest little towns that he had ever seen. He liked the people—they seemed different. He was sure to like the place, already liked it.

Lulu came to the door in Ninian's thin black-and-white gown. She shook hands with the stranger, not looking at him, and said, "Come to supper, all." Motion was already in her place, slinging under-breath. Mrs. Bett, after hovering in the kitchen door, entered; but they forgot to introduce her.

"Where's Di?" asked Ina. "I declare that daughter of mine is never anywhere."

A brief silence ensued as they were seated. There being a guest, grace was to come, and Dwight said, unintelligibly and like lightning, a generic appeal to bless this food, forgive all our sins and finally save us. And there was something tremendous in this ancient form whereby all stages of men bow in some now unrecognized recognition of the ceremonial of taking food to nourish life—and more.

"At Amen!" Di flashed in, her eyes at the mirror fresh upon her—perfect hair, silk dress turned up at the hem. She met Cornish, crimsoned, fluttered to her seat, joggled the table and, "Oh, dear," she said audibly to her mother, "I forgot my ring."

The talk was saved alive by a frank effort. Dwight served, making jests about everybody coming back for more. They went on with Warbleton happenings, improvements and openings; and the runaway. Cornish tried hard to make himself agreeable, not ingratiatingly, but good-naturedly. He wished profoundly that before coming he had looked up some more stories in the back of the Musical Gazette.

Lulu surreptitiously pinched off an ant that was rumpling at large upon the cloth and thereupon kept her eyes steadfastly on the sugar bowl to see if it could be from that. Dwight pretended that those whom he was helping a second time were getting more than their share and facetiously landed on Di about eating so much that she would grow up and be married, first thing she knew. At the word "married" Di turned scarlet, laughed heartily and lifted her glass of water.

"And what instruments do you play?" Ina asked Cornish, in an unrelated effort to lift the talk to musical levels.

"Well, do you know," said the music man, "I can't play a thing. Don't know a black note from a white one."

"You don't? Why do you play very prettily," said Ina's mother. "But, then, how can you tell what songs to order?" Ina cried.

"Oh, by the music houses. You go by the sales." For the first time it occurred to Cornish that this was ridiculous. "You know, I'm really studying law," he said, shyly and proudly.

Law! How very interesting, from Ina. Oh, but won't he bring up some songs some evening, for them to try over? Her and Di? At this Di laughed and said that she was out of practice and lifted her glass of water. In the presence of adults Di made one weep, she was so slender, so young, so without defenses, so intolerably sensitive to every contact, so in agony lest she be found wanting. It was amazing how unlike was this Di to the Di who had ensnared Bobby Larkin. What was one to think?

Cornish paid very little attention to her. To Lulu he said kindly, "Don't you play, Miss—?" He had not caught her name—no stranger ever did catch it. But Dwight now supplied it: "Miss Lulu Bett," he explained, with loud emphasis, and Lulu burned her slow red. This question Lulu had usually answered by telling how a felon had interrupted her lessons and she had stopped "taking"—a participle sacred to music, in Warbleton. This vignette had been a kind of epitome of Lulu's biography. But now Lulu was heard to say, serenely:

"No, but I'm quite fond of it. I went to a lovely concert—two weeks ago."

They all listened. Strange, indeed, to think of Lulu as having had experiences of which they did not know.

"Yes," she said. "It was in Savannah, Georgia." She flushed, and lifted her eyes in a manner of faint defiance.

"Of course," she said. "I don't know the names of all the different instruments they played, but there were a good many." She laughed pleasantly as a part of her sentence. "They had some lovely tunes," she said. She knew that the subject was not exhausted and she hurried on. "The hall was real large," she superadded, "and there were quite a good many people there. And it was too warm."

"I see," said Cornish, and said what he had been waiting to say: That he, too, had been in Savannah, Georgia.

Lulu lit with pleasure. "Well," she said. And her mind worked and she caught at the moment before it had escaped. "Isn't it a pretty city?" she asked. And Cornish assented with the intense heartiness of the provincial. He, too, it seemed, had a conversational appearance to maintain by its own effort. He said that he had enjoyed being in that town and that he was there for two hours.

"I was there for a week," Lulu's superiority was really pretty.

"Have good weather?" Cornish selected next.

"Oh, yes. And they saw all the different buildings—but at her 'we' she flushed and was silenced. She was coloring and breathing quickly. This was the first bit of conversation of this sort in Lulu's life.

After supper Ina inevitably proposed croquet. Dwight pretended to try to escape and, with his irrepressible mien, talked about Ina, elaborate in his insistence on the third person—"She loves it, we have to humor her, you know how it is. Or no! You don't know! But you will"—and more of the same sort, everybody laughing heartily, saw Lulu, who looked uncomfortable and wished that Dwight wouldn't, and Mrs. Bett, who paid no attention to anybody that night, not because she had not been introduced, an omission which she had not even noticed, but merely as another form of "tantrum"—a self-indulgence.

They emerged for croquet. And there on the porch sat Jenny Plov and Bobby, waiting for Di to keep an old engagement, which Di pretended to have forgotten, and to be frightfully annoyed to have to keep. She met the objections of her parents with all the batteries of her coquetry, set for both Bobby and Cornish and, held in the presence of "company," at last went laughing away. And in the minute areas of her consciousness she said to herself that Bobby would be more in love with her than ever because she had risked all to go with him; and that Cornish ought to be distinctly attracted to her because she had not stayed. She was as primitive as pollen.

Ina was vexed. She said so, pointing in a fashion which she should have outgrown with white muslin and blue ribbons, and she had outgrown none of these things.

"That just spoils croquet," she said. "I'm vexed. Now we can't have a real game."

From the side door, where she must have been lingering among the water-proofs, Lulu stepped forth.

"I'll play a game," she said.

When Cornish actually proposed to bring some music to the Deacons, Ina turned toward Dwight Herbert all the facets of her responsibility. And Ina's sense of responsibility toward Di was enormous, oppressive, primitive, amounting, in fact, toward this daughter of Dwight Herbert's late wife, to an ability to compress the offices of stepmotherhood into the functions of the lecture platform. Her idea of a daughter, step or not, was that of a manufactured product, strictly, which you constantly pinched and molded. She thought that a moral preceptor had the right to secrete precepts. Di got them all. But of course the crest of Ina's responsibility was to marry Di. This verb should be transitive only when lovers are speaking of each other, or the minister or magistrate is speaking of lovers. It should never be transitive when predicated of parents or any other third party. But it is. Ina was quite agitated by its transitivity as she took to her husband her incredible responsibility.

"You know, Herbert," said Ina, "if this Mr. Cornish comes here very much, what we may expect."

"What may we expect?" demanded Dwight Herbert, crisply.

Ina always played his games, answered what he expected her to answer, pretended to be intuitive when she was not so, said "I know" when she didn't know at all. Dwight Herbert, on the other hand, did not even play her games when he knew perfectly what she meant, but pretended not to understand, made her repeat, made her explain. It was as if Ina had to please him for, say, a living; but as for that dentist, he had to please nobody. In the conversations of Dwight and Ina you saw the historical home forming in clots in the fluid wash of the community.

"He'll fall in love with Di," said Ina.

"And what of that? Little daughter will have many a man fall in love with her, I should say."

"Yes, but, Dwight, what do you think of him?"

"What do I think of him? My dear Ina, I have other things to think of."

"But we don't know anything about him, Dwight—a stranger so."

"On the other hand," said Dwight with dignity, "I know a good deal about him."

With a great air of having done the fatherly and found out about this stranger before bringing him into the home, Dwight now related a number of stray circumstances dropped by Cornish in their chance talks.

"He has a little inheritance coming to him—shortly," Dwight wound up.

"An inheritance—really? How much, Dwight?"

"Now isn't that like a woman, isn't it?"

"I thought he was from a good family," said Ina.

"My mercenary little pussy!"

"Well," she said with a sigh, "I shouldn't be surprised if Di did really accept him. A young girl is awfully flattered when a good-looking older man pays her attention. Haven't you noticed that?"

A few evenings later, Cornish brought up the music. There was something overpowering in this brown-haired chap against the background of his negligible little shop, his whole capital in his few pianos. For he looked hopefully ahead, woke with plans, regarded the children in the street as if, conceivably, children might come within the compass of his life as he imagined it. A preposterous little man. And a preposterous store, empty, echoing, bare of wall, the three pianos near the front, the remainder of the floor stretching away like the corridors of the lost. He was going to get a dark curtain, he explained, and furnish the back part of the store as his own room. What dignity in phrasing, but how mean that little room would look—cot bed, washbowl and pitcher, and little mirror—almost certainly a mirror with a wavy surface, almost certainly that.

"And then, you know," he always added, "I'm reading law."

The Flows had been asked in that evening. Bobby was there. They were, Dwight Herbert said, going to have a sing.

Di was to play. And Di was now embarked on the most difficult feat of her emotional life, the feat of remaining to Bobby Larkin the lure, the beloved lure, the while to Cornish she instinctively played the role of womanly little girl.

"Up by the festive lamp, everybody!" Dwight Herbert cried.

As they gathered about the upright piano, that started, Dwight instrument, standing in its attitude of unrest, Lulu came in with another lamp.

"Do you need this?" she asked.

They did not need it, there was, in fact, no place to set it, and this Lulu must have known. But Dwight found a place. He swept Ninian's photograph from the marble shelf of the mirror, and when Lulu had placed the lamp there, Dwight thrust the photograph into her hands.

"You take care of that," he said, with a drop of lid discernible only to those who—presumably—loved him. His old attitude toward Lulu had shown a terrible sharpening in these ten days since her return.

She stood uncertainly, in the thin black and white gown which Ninian had bought for her, and held Ninian's photograph and looked helplessly about. She was moving toward the door when Cornish called:

"See here! Aren't you going to sing?"

"What?" Dwight used the falsetto. "Lulu sing? Lulu?"

LIFE ETERNAL

Does GOD rule death, if death there really be? He must, because He is OMNIPOTENT. But what is death, if death there really be? Or where does it hide, since

GOD is OMNIPRESENT?

Tell, by what law of SPIRIT has it a place? It is unlovely; our CREATOR is LOVE; And like does not beget unlike in GRACE: By their fruits ye shall know them, saith THE DOVE.

GOOD is IMMORTAL TRUTH, how can it die? Our mortal dreams alone must pass away.

Christ bids us Live; his WORD is LIFE on high; Illumined THOUGHT maintains eternal DAY.

Then, like The Son, let Sons THE FATHER reflect, O'erturning death, through CONQUEST of defect.

Starling Worth Protecting Except When Damaging Crops

Contrary to popular opinion, the starling is not an undesirable bird alien, according to the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. Most of its food habits have been demonstrated to be either beneficial to man or of a neutral character. The time the bird spends destroying other birds is short compared with the endless hours it spends searching for insects or feeding on wild fruits.

To determine what should be the attitude of the public toward the starling, in respect to protective legislation, the Biological Survey has made an extensive study of it. The starling secures less than six per cent of its yearly food from cultivated crops. The bluebird and the flicker suffer most at the breeding season from the starling's attacks on their nests.

In most States where starlings are present, even in moderate numbers, they have been placed on the list of exceptions to protection. In Maine they are given protection subject to a provision whereby they may be killed when destroying crops. The department recommends this type of law in justice to the farmer whose crops are threatened by a local over-abundance of these birds. Roosts of starlings may be broken up by frightening the birds with the persistent use of firearms or Roman candles, but vigilance is necessary to prevent the reestablishment of roosts by removal to other places where they would be equally objectionable.

London has a dog ambulance. A motor-cycle with a sidecar is padded with straw and blankets, in which the animal is placed. The ambulance is ready at all times of day or night and may be called by telephone. A veterinary accompanies the ambulance. If the case is hopeless, he kills the dog. If the case is curable, the dog is rushed to the operating table of the hospital.
